LAWCHA Conference 2017

Scales of Struggle Communities, Movements, and Global Connections

LABOR AND WORKING CLASS HISTORY ASSOCIATION

Welcome

We gather at a critical time, in an instructive place, with a theme —Scales of Struggle —that captures the urgency of this moment. Six months into the regime of Donald J. Trump, the world waits, breathing shallowly, as the craziness unfolds. One thing is clear — resistance matters. The rightwing agenda has been slowed because of the determined resistance of the millions who have taken to the streets, because of brave journalists who are determined to expose the truth, because some judges and state and city officials have said no, and all of that is because Labor and social movements devoted to immigrant rights, women's rights, and Black Lives Matter have stood strong, fighting back even as the risks escalate.

Seattle is the right place for this gathering. It offers recent and historic examples of smart and effective struggles that have won victories for working people. This is a city where unions remain strong and where movements for social justice exert influence both in policy and public imagination. And it is a city that embraces its labor history.

The Scales of Struggle conference features nearly 100 panels, workshops, films, and performances, along with five plenary sessions. We scale geography, from local to global. We scale time, across three centuries. And we scale struggles, ranging from work-based organization to social movements, from direct action to educational campaigns, from local alliances to transnational coalitions. The program also tracks four subthemes: War and Empire (on this centennial of WWI); Borders and Coalitions (as the struggle for immigrant rights takes new urgency); Struggling for Justice (as every expectation of justice is threatened); Public Work of Labor History (uncovering the work of teachers, labor educators and public historians)

If you have not managed a conference of this scope, you can't appreciate the contribution of the two people who have done the most to make it possible. Co-chairs Nikki Mandell and Shel Stromquist wove together this complicated program, helped by committee members Keona Ervin, Eric Fure-Slocum, Julie Green, Sonia Hernandez, Toby Higbie, Jennifer Klein, Nancy MacLean, Emily Twarog, and Naomi Williams. The Harry Bridges Center for Labor Studies hosts the conference, led by Director Michael McCann and Associate Director Andrew Hedden. We are also very grateful for financial support provided by the UW History Department and the UW Social Sciences Division. At a critical moment, History Librarian Theresa Mudrock volunteered to design and produce this printed program. My deepest thanks to all.

Conference Facilities

Welcome to Seattle and the University of Washington. Except for the opening reception and plenary Thursday evening, all but one session will be held in the architecturally innovative Mary Gates Hall in the center of the campus. Featuring session rooms on the second floor and a spectacular Commons for plenaries, book exhibits, informal meetings, and conversation, the facility gives us the spatial conditions for an intense and free-flowing conference. Box lunches will be served at noon Friday and Saturday in the MGH Commons to registrants who have enrolled for the full conference. We have ordered a variety of sandwiches including vegetarian and gluten free salads.

MGH rooms are equipped with a built-in PC, WiFi, speakers, and projector. There are also VGA and HDMI cables for laptops. MAC users will need to bring an appropriate adapter or a flashdrive that has been tested for PC compatibility.

Conference Website

The conference website provides detailed information about the local area, including:

- Transportation
- Restaurants nearby and downtown
- Ideas for Seattle sight-seeing
- Guide to Seattle labor history
- Google map that will help you get from place to place

Local Information

NEARBY RESTAURANTS

Seattle is a great eating town; however, the University District isn't known for its culinary highlights. Here are a few recommended places to try within walking distance. Many are located along University Way (aka the Ave).

- Agua Verde (1303 NE Boat Street) Enjoy your margarita and Mexican food with a water view
- Chili's South Indian (4220 University Way NE) Known for spicy southern Indian cuisine, dosas and inexpensive lunch buffet.
- Ivar's Salmon House (401 NE Northlake Way) A Seattle classic where you can eat your seafood in a longhouse replica along with spectacular water views.
- Shalimar (4214 University Way) Another South Asian restaurant conveniently located near Chili's.
- Spring Kitchen (4002 University Way NE) Mostly Vietnamese with a bit of teriyaki thrown in.
- Xi'an Noodles (5259 University Way NE) Known for its handmade noodles (biang biang), perhaps worth the long trek up the Ave.

HAPPY HOUR PUBS:

- Big Time Brewery (4133 University Way NE) Ten beers on tap and standard pub grub.
- College Inn Pub (4006 University Way NE) Quintessential basement dive bar.
- Shultzy's Bar and Grill (4114 University Way NE) Have your beer and a bratwurst too. Full bar.

FREE TIME? THINGS TO DO NEARBY

- Rent a canoe and see Seattle by water. The Waterfront Activities Center is located behind Husky Stadium. Or rent a kayak from the Aqua Verde Paddle Club (1307 NE Boat St.)
- Traverse all 18 miles of the Burke-Gilman Trail or perhaps just stroll the short stretch from the UW to Gas Works Park. Bike rentals available at Recycled Cycles (1007 NE Boat St.).
- Visit the UW's two museums: Burke Museum of Natural History & Culture and the Henry Art Gallery.
- Wander through the beautiful campus. Stop by Suzzallo Library and admire its magnificent Reading Room.

SEATTLE'S LABOR HISTORY

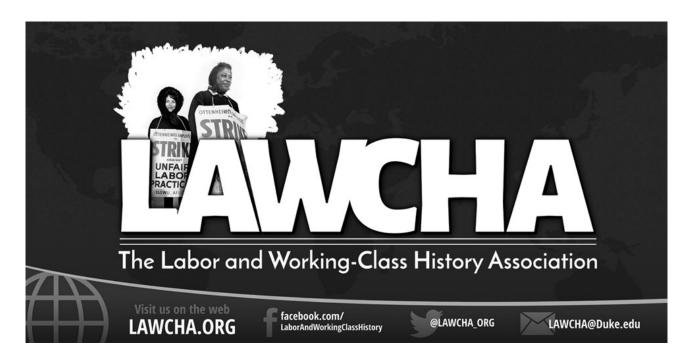

Few cities make use of labor history the way Seattle does. The city proudly recognizes struggles like the Seattle General Strike of 1919 and the 1999 WTO Battle of Seattle as part of what makes the region famous and important. News media, city officials, and educators join in commemorating key anniversaries.

This is no accident. It reflects the continued political importance of unions and the ongoing cultural work of labor activists and labor educators.

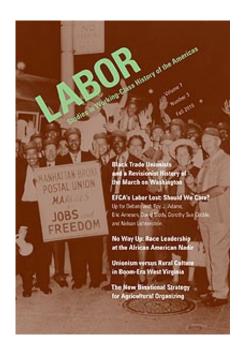

Highlights of the history of working people in Washington State are depicted in a stunning new mural at the Washington State Labor Council headquarters on Jackson at 16th pictured above. Below is a scene from the Pablo O'Higgins mural "The Struggle Against Racial Discrimination." Painted for the Shipscalers Union Hall in 1945, it now hangs in Kane Hall of the UW campus.

Visit the conference website (lawcha.org) to read a short essay about the past and present of labor and social movement activism in Seattle and to see examples of labor art at UW.

TEACHING LABOR'S STORY

Incorporate the experiences of working men, women and children into your existing curriculum with professionally selected & resourced documents

LAWCHA WANTS TO CHANGE THE NARRATIVE

CALL FOR CONTRIBUTORS TO "TEACHING LABOR'S STORY"

NEW CROWD-SOURCED TEACHING RESOURCE PROJECT

Teacher/Public Sector Initiative

lawcha.org/wordpress/teaching-resources/

Teaching Labor's Story takes on the neglect and distortions of labor's history in standard textbooks and mainstream narratives. Our goal is to redress these problems by developing and disseminating resources that enable educators to re-infuse labor's story into the historical narrative. Teaching Labor's Story is designed to meet educators where they are by providing resources that can be readily incorporated by experts and non-experts alike into existing curriculum [high school, college, university, workers' school].

Teaching Labor's Story will provide teachers, faculty and labor educators with on-line access to:

- Primary source documents: selected [and edited to teachable length] to reveal workers' voices, experiences and actions during commonly taught historical eras and events
- Teaching guide for each document: a custom-written annotation that unpacks and contextualizes the document; connects the document to established history curriculum and standards; and provides a brief glossary of terms, additional resources, and discussion/writing prompts.

Teaching Labor's Story documents and guides will be peer-reviewed and published on-line at LAWCHA Teaching Resources.

UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES

UNIVERSITY of WASHINGTON Labor Archives of Washington

Based at the University of Washington, the Harry Bridges Center for Labor Studies engages students in labor studies through courses and field work. We promote connections between students, faculty, and labor communities locally and around the world, and inform policy makers about issues confronting workers.

The Center supports a network of scholars in cutting-edge research, education, and outreach about work, workers and their organizations.

Honoring a Legacy

The Harry Bridges Endowed Chair and Center for Labor Studies honor the legacy and democratic politics of the late

Harry Bridges, founder and leader of the International Longshore and Warehouse Union (ILWU).

As a tribute to Bridges' memory, over one thousand contributors, spearheaded by current and retired members of the ILWU, raised funds to endow a faculty chair and launch the Center in 1992.

Engaging Students

Hundreds of University of Washington students enroll each year in Labor Studies courses, some choosing to earn a Minor in Labor Studies and many working in internships with labor and social justice organizations.

Annual scholarships support students passionate about the study of labor. When they graduate, many go on to be part of the labor movement.

Supporting Labor Research

Labor research is an essential part of the Bridges Center's mission.

More than sixty faculty members affiliated with the Center conduct research on subjects from occupational safety to civil rights and union democracy.

The Center's grants and prizes have led to more than 100 publications that advance knowledge and pave the way for social change.

Building Community

The Center brings people together from the academic world, the labor movement, and

We sponsor activities in the community bringing issues of concern to the widest possible audience. Our faculty are often consulted by policy makers and journalists seeking information about labor issues.

Additional Information

Labor History Bus Tour Sunday 8:30-11:30

If you pre-purchased a ticket for the Labor History tour, please meet Andrew Hedden (Associate Director, Harry Bridges Center) at the flag poll turn-around north of Red Square. See map on back cover or online map at conference website. Please do not be late.

Lunch options

Box lunches have been ordered for all who have registered for the full conference (including guests). They will be served in Mary Gates Commons at noon, Friday and Saturday. Feel free to take your lunch outside the building or upstairs. A plenary session will require quiet in the Commons starting at 12:20.

We have ordered a variety of sandwiches and two gluten-free salads from Bay Laurel Catering, a unionized service of UW. Look for the table sign associated with one of these choices:

- Roasted Turkey and Havarti
- Smoked Ham and Swiss
- Fresh Veggie
- Caesar Salad with Grilled Chicken (GF)
- Quinoa Salad (VG) (GF)

Please deposit all trash in the compost bins in and around Mary Gates Hall

Transit to and from downtown

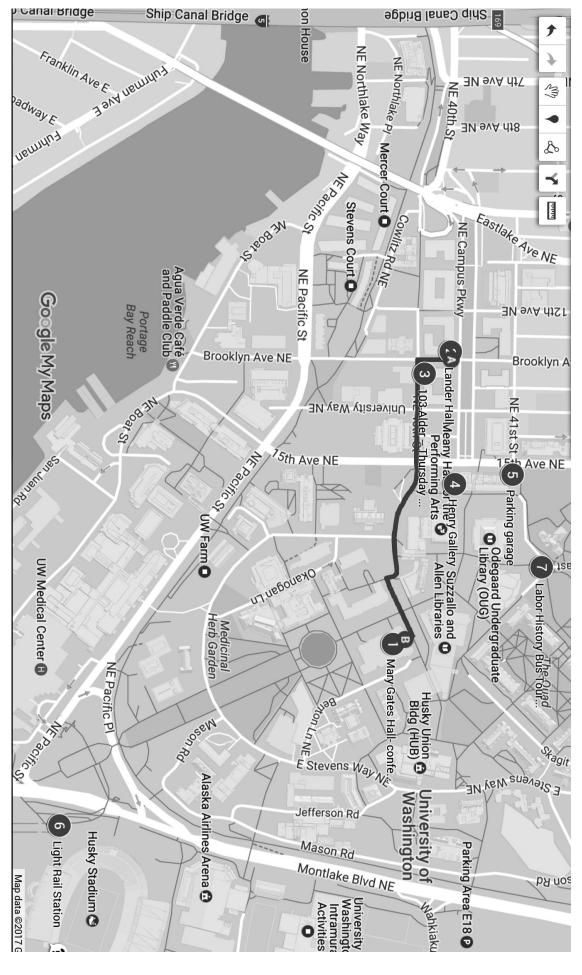

Bus service from the University District (near Lander Hall) is 20-25 minutes to downtown. Catch the 70 at Campus Parkway and 12th. across from Lander Hall. Buses run every 10-15 minutes. Get off at 3rd and Pine near Pike Place Market and downtown locations. Return on the 70 (3rd and Pike) or 49 (4th and Pike).

To and from Mary Gates Hall and other central campus locations, it is faster to take Link light rail from the UW station. This involves a short walk down the Rainier Vista from MGH.

King County metro trip planner provides schedules for these routes and can help you reach other locations. http://tripplanner.kingcounty.gov/
